Customers say

Customers find the power bank works well, is robust, and has high battery life that lasts for days. They appreciate its capacity and consider it worth the price, with one customer noting it powers their camera for several days. The charging time and weight receive mixed feedback - while it can charge multiple items simultaneously, it takes two days to fully charge, and though it's lightweight, some find it heavy.

Able to charge all device at once.

Most definitely a bang for you buck! It's a little on the heavy side but for my use it's not a problem. With the battery fully depleted, it took about 10 hours to fully charge. Over all I would definitely buy again for the price and capacity.

Robust, sturdy and heavy. Takes time to recharge but it's worth it. I only use it with my grow light for my plants in the bathroom and charge every other day, but it could easily last and give you a few solid phone chargers plus a computer charge (haven't tested it so don't take my word for it)

The jethro tull of portable battery banks

This thing is thick as a brick. It'll charge everything for days and the battery will keep on powering through. It's sturdy and tough, helpful if you want to charge a bunch of stuff at once, and great to keep in your car or your backpack in case you aren't near a charging port. It'll also save you from getting data stolen at charging ports in places like the airport. I use it every day and it hasn't missed a beat.

Over 24hrs to charge measured only about 38000mAH

Reviewed in the United States on December 7, 2024

1. I got only 140Wh out of fully charged pack (i have tested 3 packs so far, all about the same). I used 12V/1A load and the pack outputs 11.65V indicating direct connection to batteries with no conversion loss, so this measured capacity is very accurate. So the real rating is more like 38000mAH, almost half the claimed capacity, but it is average exaggeration for these low cost powers packs, seems they all are about half the claimed capacity. By now I can tell the capacity right away just by the weight of the pack.

2. Charging time > 24Hrs. This is a deal breaker for me as I use the full charge every day, but because it takes a full day to charge, u can only use it every other day, actually even worse because u often not in a position to charge it right away, so essentially i can use it every third day!

I have another 50000mAH pack that charges is less than 4hrs, (granted it has 30W usb-c). But several dealers sell this pack on amazon and some claim that it can charge in 24Hrs at 5V/2A or in 15Hrs at 9V/2A. I have many chargers all capable of 9V/2A but none will charge it in 15Hours. I have tried both the USB C and micro USB inputs, no difference. If anybody has been able to get it to work 9V/2A I would like to know
